ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A telecommunications system having a software dispatcher is provided for delivering messages between dispatcher clients, i.e., software subsystems that may 5 be in the same process, a different process, or on a different machine. The dispatcher manages a pool of threads to balance the workload. The dispatcher can process both synchronous and asynchronous messages by dispatching the message to all registered subsystems in order of their registered priority.